Client Minutes - (11/07/24)

Demonstrated export button and the format of the schedule to the client. The client suggested adding the DJ name to the schedule view on the web application and if they don't have one just use first name last name. There is also the export button which the client suggested to make into one excel file sheet with the days as the columns and the times as the rows.

Team Meeting - (11/04/24)

Had a sprint planning meeting where we decided potential stories for the upcoming sprint and assigned the stories to team members. We have decided that the main focus for the final sprint will be arranging the schedule results in a more readable format, creating a list of assigned RJs, and improving the scheduling diagram. Some other changes also include visually improving the UI, creating an export schedule function, and adjusting the file upload feature so that files cannot be overwritten.

User Stories

Feature: Refine Scheduling Algorithm	Assignee	Story Points
As an admin, I want the schedule generation algorithm to check for more open time slots in a user's alternative list so that they have a higher chance of getting scheduled.	Davis Kriti	7

Feature: Add DJ Names for a single show name	Assignee	Story Points
As an admin, when I generate the schedule, for each entry, the DJ(s) hosting the show should be visible	Ali Kriti	2

Feature: Display the Assigned RJs	Assignee	Story Points
As an admin, when I generate a schedule, then the RJs aren't retaining their former timeslots, should appear in the calendar.	Haridher	1

Sprint Goal:

Each user story should be finished with working functionality as well as code quality and unit testing.

Stories Pulled Into The Sprint:

Listed above. The Story Points assigned to each story equates roughly to the number of working days we expect the story to take. For example, a 2 point story is one we estimate to take the developer about 2 total days to both implement and test.

Backlog:

There are currently no stories in the backlog for this sprint.

Time and Assignment:

Team members are assigned with individual user stories as listed above and the coding should be done by Wednesday 11/13/2024.
